The Future!
Evan H.
Grade: 4

Everyone will predict the future in different ways. We can’t tell what it will be like. I think there will be floating auto cars. You wouldn’t have to drive it yourself. That is what I predict for cars in the future. There are a lot of movies and television shows that have predicted the future. One television show I know that predicted the future is the Jetsons. They were on a while ago. They predicted a lot of stuff like robot maids. I don’t think any predictions have been correct on that show. A movie that predicted the future is Back to the Future III. It predicted a lot of futuristic items. The predictions time were based on Oct. 15, 2015. Their predictions weren’t correct but one was correct. That was the tie on shoes. They would tie themselves on. A lot of predictions were wrong on that movie, but it was still a good movie. Who knows what will happen in the future. Nobody knows. It will be a mystery until then.

Each student will also make a poster and a speech. I will be dressing up as Lionel Messi. If you want to hear someone’s speech there is a little paper laminated button. Mrs. Dimino likes to go around and push five buttons at once. Everyone has to study to make their poster look good so if you haven’t done anything yet GO GO GO! Parents are welcome to come.

Some say it honors both Presidents and believe it or not some say it honors all the Presidents. I think it should honor Lincoln and Washington’s Birthday. Who do you think it should honor?

Ishaan J.
Grade: 5

Ah adults! I feel your pain. You have to work, work, and disapprove of your children using their modern conveniences, like iPods, iPads, tablets, and game consoles. Wait! That last thing might not be so bad! Just you wait and see. By the end of this article, you might be thinking, “Hey, maybe my kids doing video games won’t be SO bad!” WE will be talking mainly about game consoles, and why you should allow a little more for your kids.

1. Video games can improve children’s reflexes. Fast-paced video games can improve children’s reflexes in areas that reflexes are important, like playing sports.
2. Video games can improve children’s vision. It won’t improve their vision in general, but it will improve their ability of looking around.
3. It will create mental peace. If your child is stressed out about homework or a project, video games can bring mental peace and make them work a little less stressed out when the time comes.

Video games might not be such a bad thing, Parents!

Bertie Saves the Day!
Claire T. and Emma E.
Grade: 5

There once was a dragon named Bertie. He loved people but he hated burgers. He was more of a hot dog dragon. One day he was looking for a hot dog when he heard a nacho scream, “I'm covered in cheese!” “I have to help,” Bertie thought to himself. So, he charged up on 100 hot dogs and went to save the day. He enjoyed helping people because he was a nice dragon, not a bad fire breathing one (he breathed hot dog breath). He flew over to the screaming nacho and said, “Don’t worry, I’m here to help!” Bertie said. “Right now the cheese is melting me! My crispy tortilla chip is getting soggy!” the nacho screamed, “Better pop me in the oven.” Bertie flew right over to the nacho, got a towel, and wiped off the cheese. He then flew at super speed with the nacho to the oven. Bertie popped him in for 30 seconds and then the nacho became crispy and crunchy again. But he had no cheese and a nacho needs cheese. Screaming Nacho screamed some more about needing more cheese, so Bertie ran to the hot dog stand and grabbed some cheese. This time the cheese wasn’t melted so the nacho was happy. “Thank you Bertie! You saved my life!” The nacho said. From then on Bertie was considered a great hero to the people of his town.

The Things You Need To Get In the NBA

Ishaan J.
Grade: 5

Lebron James, Steph Curry, Draymond Green. All these people made it to the pros, the big leagues, or the NBA. It’s no secret how they made it though. They made it through hard work, discipline, and practice. They wanted to be up there, scoring baskets, and 3’s, and whatever not. Wait! You can do that too! You need to have only hard work and discipline!

We will be talking about the three things you need to possess to survive in the NBA.

1. Hard work. Of course, you need to work hard to do well and flourish in anything. If you don’t work hard, that means you are slacking off. And by the way some people shoot 3’s and make dunks, you can tell that they didn’t slack off!
2. Discipline. This is where the trying-to-yell-your-head-off coaches come in. This quality kind of sparks the other ones to happen. Most basketball coaches will discipline you to work hard and do better in front of them by the way they yell at you. If you don’t do well the coach will yell your head off, but if you do well the coach will use you as an example for the other players.
3. Practice. “Practice makes perfect!” they say. If you practice, you can shoot those 3’s you always wanted to shoot, or dribble the way you always wanted to dribble, practice is the way to go!

These 3 things will give you the thing you need to be a NBA star!
