Confidentiality

When working with regular education and special education students it is critical to protect the student’s rights by not talking about individual students or incidents that happen on your bus. If you drive or ride a special needs bus or know of a special needs student on your bus it is extremely important not to discuss the student's disability, areas of need, or the names of the students in any environment. It's important that written and oral communication between students and school personnel are confidential. In some circumstances, the administrator of the school district may reveal confidential information to a student's parent or legal guardian and other appropriate authorities, including law enforcement personnel.

Please do not discuss with parents or neighbors anything concerning transportation, routes, pupils, parents, teachers, classes or equipment. Any person asking questions regarding school business should be directed to the proper authorities: i.e., teacher, principal, transportation supervisor, or contractor.
